Codavita Launch Their Zombie Music Video ‘In Love With Fear’

London, 21 October 2008 –

London based pop band Codavita have today released their zombie music video ‘In Love With Fear’ for streaming on the video sharing site YouTube at www.youtube.com/codavita.

The video was premiered at the Richmix Cinema in Shoreditch on 2 October 2008, and is their chart-pop homage to 80s video nasties such as The Evil Dead.

The video is a promo for the song ‘In Love With Fear’, which is also available for streaming on the band’s web site www.codavita.com, along with another song ‘Lifter’, both of which are taken from their forthcoming album.

Influences:

XTC, Pet Shop Boys, Talking Heads, Xenomania, Gwen Stefani, Timbaland, Prince, Adam Ant, Sugababes, The Magnetic Fields, Human League.

About The Band:

Codavita are Fergus on vocals, guitar and studio, and Guy on bass. They met at school and hated each other for years. Finally they bonded over a shared love of Ultravox, ran a compact cassette library together, and started their musical adventure performing drum duets.

In Their Own Words:

"If Boney M can write an ode to the deranged mystic Rasputin who brought down the Russian Czars, maybe we can write songs about 80’s video nasties, but give them the sound of modern pop producers like Timbaland or Xenomania."
